Babylon Teach-in

“Who’s interested in ...?”:

26 March 2014,
13:00-14:30, room D152

Who’s interested in ... Joanna Plaza Pinto’s data?

Joana Plaza Pinto examines recent media materials from Brazil addressing immigration. Brazil is on the one hand welcoming highly qualified migrants, celebrated as important assets in a developing society, but they also accept large numbers of immigrants from Haiti, and over the past years also Cuban doctors working with the poorest Brazilians. The media materials show delicate shifts in footing, visual as well as textual, in which race, gender, social class and economic stratification coincide and interact in complex ways.