Conference:
Democracy, Legality and Policy

Tilburg, 31.05.2012 - 01.06.2012
Synopsis

This conference brings together experts from political philosophy, legal philosophy and social epistemology to examine fundamental issues in the theory of democracy. Is there an internal connection between the value of democracy within a group of enquirers and the “objective” standing of the products of that inquiry? How is the ideal of democratic self-governance connected to the pluralism of moral values? What is the relationship between the normative authority of democracy and of a legal system? How might the emergence of a trans-national legal order alter how we think about constitutional ideas? In what way can formal methods give insight into practical policy issues?

This conference is a joint event with Tilburg University’s Department of Philosophy.

Organizers: Stephan Hartmann (Tilburg University), Hans Lindahl (Tilburg University), Alan Thomas (Tilburg University)
