

Dr Estêvão Cabral has a PhD in Political Science from Lancaster University, UK. His doctoral studies were funded by Fundação para a Ciência e Tecnologia (Portuguese Government, Science and Technology Foundation). He has done research on the political history of East-Timor, on literacy during the years of Resistance to the Indonesian invasion and occupation of East-Timor and on language policy in East-Timor. He was an Associate Research Fellow in the Department of Politics and International Relations, Lancaster University, from October 2002 to September 2005, a Visiting Research Fellow at the Department of International Politics at the University of Wales, Aberystwyth, from September 2003 to September 2006 and then an Honorary Research Fellow at the Department of Political Science and International Studies, University of Birmingham.

In 2004, he was awarded a British Academy grant to conduct post-doctoral fieldwork in East-Timor. In 2009, he was appointed, as a post-doctoral researcher, to a research project at Tilburg University, The Netherlands, entitled: Becoming a nation of readers in East-Timor: Language policy and adult literacy development in a multilingual context. The project was funded by a Dutch funding body (NWO/WOTRO Science for Global Development, Project Number: WO1 65.315.00). In this project, Dr Cabral had the main responsibility for one of the sub-projects incorporated into the wider project. This sub-project traced the history of adult literacy in East-Timor, focusing in particular on the adult literacy campaign of 1974/5, which was inspired by the work of the Brazilian educator, Paulo Freire. The research involved oral history interviews in East-Timor and Portugal and archival research.
