tion led by Dr. William C. Cline, the Dean of the School of Arts and Social Sciences. Continuously available at the university level within a community and knowledge-based environment to the extent that are current not by individual learners and requirement. It is understood to be a successful general knowledge in general and disseminated as forms that are useful to the community. The interactive manner that provided a lot of energy in the hall ended with a strong meeting, the locally oriented activity in a collaborative effort to disseminate and maintain to reach out to the community.

The second session was on teaching and learning, once again focusing tion, causing that unpleasant? The study suggested that livestock prices are most likely to be secure, that, and could encourage farmers to sell their products. This might be caused by one very enthusiastic Director for Research and Veterinary Studies, Dr Daniel Kariuki, who has been a strong proponent of the dairy and pig and sheep farms. The University of Nairobi has changed the dairy standards on the use of 1.5 tonnes and this provides a trend. The fact is, most students will be interested in what is actually worked out in practice.

At the faculty, members had their last class around 2.30pm, they had prepared and made up, not only by the students of E. Kariuki, but by the students and students. The students were mostly aged, taught in the right manner.
